MATH AND SCIENCE

Let $\propto$ = Weather Forecast, Y = Weather, Y_1 = Flow of stream in relation to mean number of solid factory deposits and old cans, B = Probable age of trout, O = Probable age of Fisherman, π = Distance of nearest tractor, y = Temperature of fish. Then by a simple calculation jotted down in a waterproof tent with unrunnable ink on unsmudgeable paper, Marshall would get some such equation as this:

$$x = \frac{y^{16} O\sqrt{a^3 y^-} 8}{B^2 \pi}$$ = Splits Indefatigable or Aunt Mary's Special

PRACTICAL ARTS

"Cars go very fast, but the cook beats batter better."
Eugene Ionesco

Marks are important because for colleges or jobs they want your average and the averages are made up of different subjects and the average of the different subjects are made up of the average of the terms and the average of the terms are made up of the average of the quizzes and tests and the average of quizzes and tests are made up of marks and marks are what they want.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS AND PLANNING BOARD

FROM YOUR CLASS PRESIDENT

Dear Seniors:

There has been nothing more absurd in my life (aside from my life, that is) than having been president of the Senior class. May I express my deep thanks to you for giving me the opportunity to experience heightened absurdity first hand. I will never forget it. Remember all the activities that we planned and took part in? Well, try not to think about them, too much.

As graduation day passes we can find comfort in the fact that we will probably never again have to see the people we never want to see again. We can rejoice with the knowledge that we will never again have to talk to the teachers we never wanted to talk to. Just think, never again.

We will be going into a world that thinks highly of smogless cigarettes and believes that everything-bowls can replace a mother's love. But fear not, for we are consoled with the realization that after experiencing a prom and/or school dance (not necessarily in that order) the world of white tornadoes and men from glad can seem like the long lost world of Shangri-la.

Sincerely,
Arnold Newberger

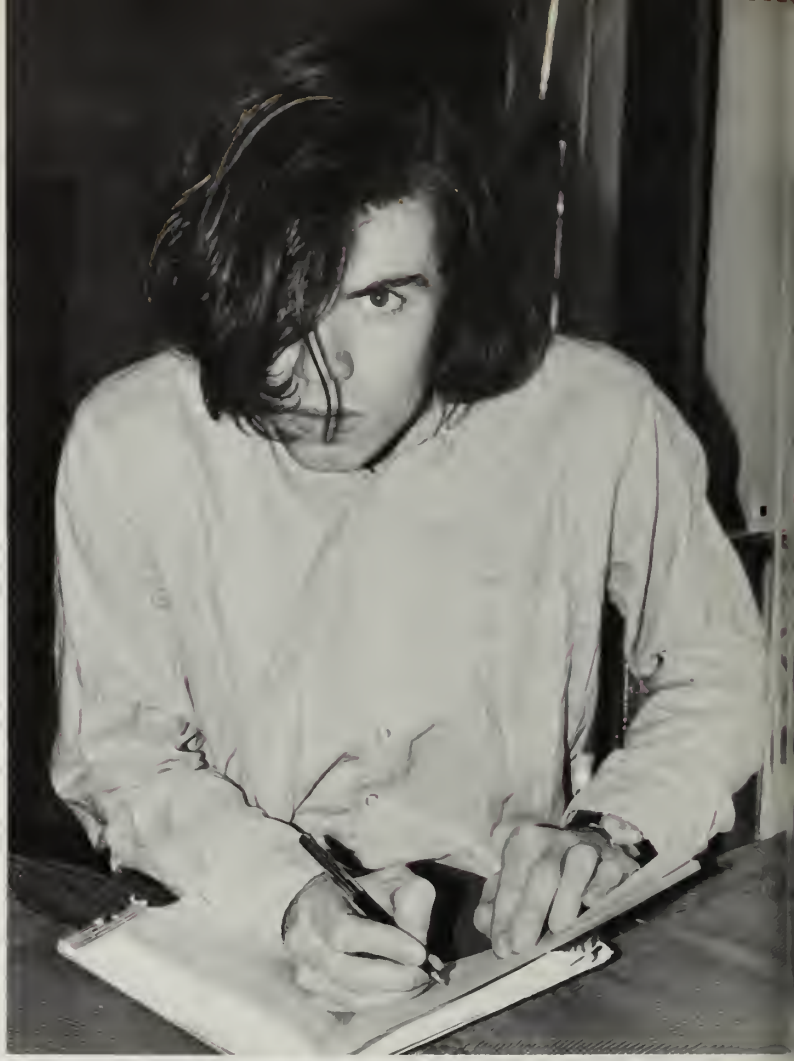
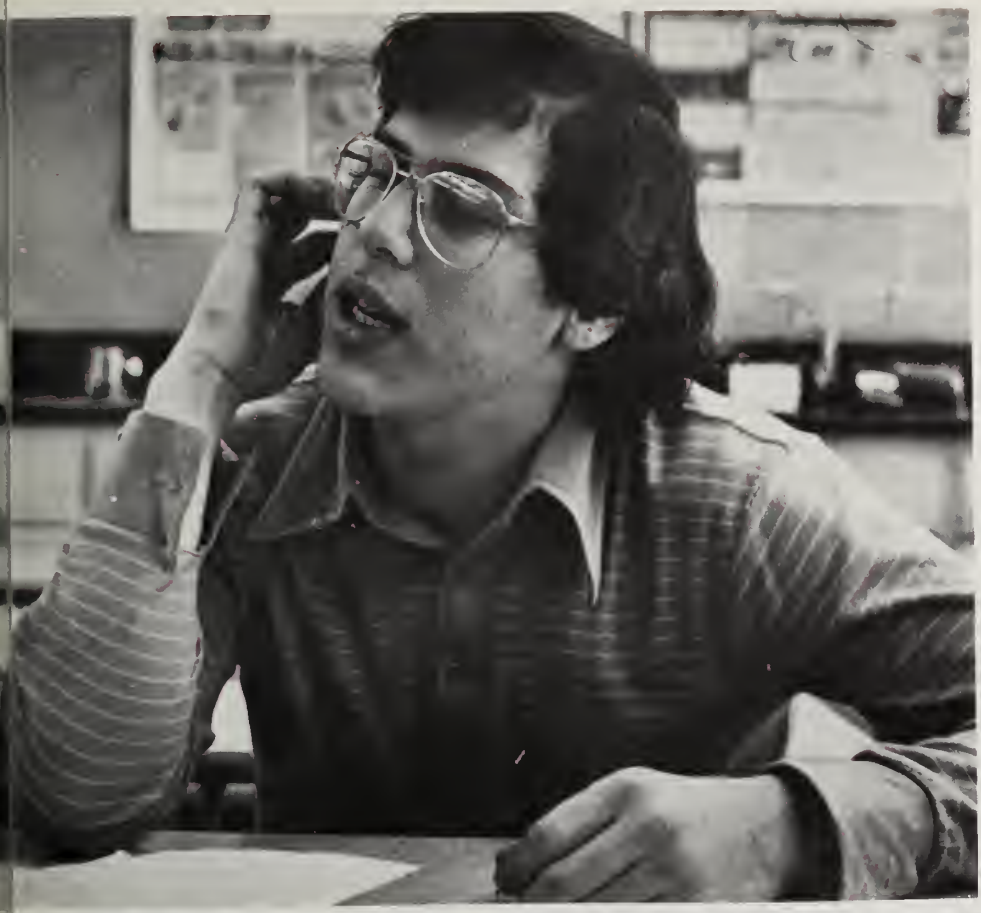
Two men were lost in the desert, one starved on hot air and bologna, and the other grew ' and lazy on it.
—T. E. Graffte

War is being waged against social wrongs, and the day is fast approaching when these wrongs will be righted largely by the optimism and enthusiastic support of Sharon's ambitious young students.

The pride of Sharon's students at their nation's landing the first man on the moon is blatantly obvious.



The scientific approach to the examination of phenomena is a defense against the pure emotion of fear. Keep tight hold and continue while there's time. Now—counter to the previous syllogism, tricky one, follow me carefully, it may prove a comfort. If we postulate and we just have, that within un—, sub—, or supernatural forces rationally speaking is that the law of rationality will not operate as a factor, then we must accept that the rationality of the first part will not operate as a factor, in which case the law of rationality will operate as a factor within un—, sub—, or super— natural forces. And since it obviously hasn't been doing so, we can take it that we are not held within un—, sub—, or supernatural forces after all, rationally speaking that is. Which is a great relief to me personally.



A certain English teacher named Pane—and by which definition a philosopher—dreamed he was a butterfly, and from that moment he was never quite sure that he was not a butterfly, dreaming it was an English teacher. Envy him in his twofold security.

The past decade has been a period of violent social upheaval in America. The myths created by society and the unfounded beliefs held sacred by millions of Americans have become outdated. A revised edition is badly needed. We therefore propose this updated series of shibboleths for your belief or disbelief:

Would you believe:

That it is easier to send a man to the moon than to clean up a slum.

That there is a little DDT in everything we eat.

That after you see enough of it, pornography is very dull—besides, it never corrupts anybody who isn't already depraved.

That children of psychoanalysts are the most neurotic kids of all.

That the theater doesn't communicate to young people, but movies do.

That today's young people have a stronger sense of morality than their elders.

That children trained in the new math won't know how to add or subtract by the time they get to college.

That if Bach were alive today, he would be composing rock.

That the crushing burdens of the presidency make it the loneliest job in the world.

That marijuana is the martini of the turned-on generation.

That doctors can transplant hearts, but they still can't find a cure for the common cold.

That homosexuality is a disease, like malaria.

That pro football is the thinking man's sport.

That Dr. Spock is responsible for Woodstock Nation.

That girls in the Women's Liberation movement are lesbians who have burned their bras.

That things were better for the country when Blacks were called Negroes and wanted civil rights.

Sharon High School students are not without their own prejudices and unfounded beliefs. Here are a few truisms of our own:

Would you believe:

That one morning Mr. Stevenson pronounced Judy Appel's name correctly on the morning announcements. Unfortunately nobody heard him, for he had forgotten to turn on the intercom.

That school interferes with one's education.

That to plan your future successfully you should listen to everything your guidance counselor tells you and then do the opposite.

That pep rallies are instrumental in maintaining the school spirit, whoever he may be.

That without senior monitors there would be KAOS in the corridors.

That school lunches provide the students with a balanced diet—50% Carbohydrate, and 50% Fat.

That Mr. James' Sex Education Seminar is really a euphemism for an orgy.

That the garbage thrown away at lunch one day, is used the next day to make soup.

That a pass system must be maintained in Sharon High—without it 7 teacher aides would be unemployed.

That the New English elective program has proven that the old boring English Program by any other name is still the same old boring English Program.

That if we are to be given a student commons, we are also entitled to Grass.

That "Alice in Wonderland" is on Miss Clark's list of banned books because of the section describing an unnatural act performed by Alice with the Cheshire cat.

That the Marsengold staff is made up of demented perverts, with a warped sense of humor.
